

Rock & Roll GLOBE

December 28, 2021

<https://rockandrollglobe.com/films/tune-in-turn-on-the-best-music-docs-of-2021/>

Tune In, Turn On: The Best Music Docs of 2021

This year the streaming services runneth over with quality content for every music fan

This week between Christmas and New Year's Day is the perfect time to catch up on your TV cache.

It was indeed a big year for superior music documentaries and docu-series, available on streaming services and by subscription as well as on-demand. And let's not forget old fashioned basic cable, at least for those with access to AXS-TV.

Here are 12 of the best watches from this year.

9. Phil Lynott: Songs for While I'm Away (On Demand)

Every week should be Phil Lynott Appreciation Week. The late Thin Lizzy frontperson is criminally underrated and shamefully not receiving the accolades that are his due. Despite humble beginnings that were not only fraught with poverty, but with horrific racism, the prolific Lynott, who died far too young, left a formidable legacy. Featuring his bandmates, close friends and family, this film is a true tribute that feels as sad as it does triumphant.

VIDEO: Phil Lynott: Songs From While I'm Away trailer